Good morning, I.S. 201! My name is Venice from class 851, and I'm here on behalf of the SEAL team for this Talk a lot Tuesday.

Today is Farmers' Day, a time to spread awareness and show gratitude to the farmers who provide us with food and keep our country, including us students, well-fed and nourished. Farmers are the backbone of food production and many other essential industries. Without them, we would face serious consequences, such as food shortages and skyrocketing prices for the remaining supply. Millions of people whose jobs depend on farming would be left unemployed, and the environment could suffer from a lack of proper land maintenance. On a more personal level, without farmers, we would lose the free lunches and breakfasts provided by our schools, leaving more students hungry and with less energy to get through the day. So today, take a moment to appreciate the hard work of farmers and be grateful for the food you eat.

Thanks for listening and let's have a Time to Harvest Tuesday 😊
